COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

The Bridge Division of the State Highway Commission is going to furnish blueprints for the Edmund Smith bridge. A preliminary study shows we will have to replace the present abutments. Last year some people experienced in this type construction felt we could reinforce the existing abutments, but further study has shown this is not feasible. Work will commence when we receive the blueprints.

A new sidewalk is to be built on Main Street at the location of the new Casco Bank building. Granite curbing has been ordered. When this is installed an asphalt material will be used for the sidewalk itself. The town is doing the complete project with the bank sharing the cost. It is very unlikely that the curbing will be available to have the sidewalk completed in time for the opening of the bank.

AMBASSADOR SPEAKS TO GOULD GRADS

The following is the full text of the speech of The Honorable Margaret Joy Tibbetts, American Ambassador to Norway, at Commencement Exercises at Gould Academy on Sunday, June 9.

Dr. Davidson, General Alger, Mr. Bigelow, members of the Graduating Class, Parents and Friends:

It is a great privilege to be your speaker today. Coming home is always heartwarming and to come home to participate in a commencement ceremony is a particular pleasure. It is, I believe, appropriate to remind ourselves that today is a day of commemoration and mourning as well as a day of celebration of accomplishment. One of Senator Robert Kennedy's strengths was his recognition that the young people of the United States deeply care about the world in which we live and that their concern and idealism are necessary for the hopes of all of us for the future. It has already been pointed out that today is an historic occasion in the life of the Academy. It would be regrettable if, in the commemoration of the more general historical event, too little emphasis were placed upon the fact that for those who are graduating the day also marks their own arrival at an important milestone.

Any such overlooking of the graduates would be misplaced, not only because of the injustice to the individuals concerned but also in the context of the historic significance of the situation. For a school is uniquely dependent upon its personnel. No crowd ever rose to its feet to cheer an Athletic Field or a Field House, no matter how distinguished its sponsors; only the players upon the field have power to involve our emotions. Similarly this splendid auditorium can never equal in value or distinction or worth in the eyes of God and man any one of the students who ever uses its facilities. We all know—and frequently cite the fact—that the success of a school depends to a great extent upon its teachers. After all, as Dr. Johnson said, "If a boy knew everything to begin with, there would be no need of Masters." But no one ever knows everything to begin with and even in the electronic marvel, the teacher will always be the great instrument of learning. But if the success of the school depends upon the teachers, the quality of the school depends upon the students. The trustees have worried and counseled, the teachers have studied and worked, and the buildings have been built and kept for those of us who studied here. It is fitting that we who are graduates should express our gratitude for their efforts. But the future of the Academy will depend in essence upon your successors—who they are, their ideals and their goals.

St. Augustine said that time consists of three presents. The past is viewed by us through our present memories of previous events. The present we are experiencing now. The future we look to on the basis of present expectations. These three presents are uniquely brought together at a graduation ceremony. For the current graduates the past is shadowy and many of the reminiscences irrelevant and trite. It is right that the emphasis should be on the present and the future, delightful as it can be to dwell on the past. "I hold that man is in the right who is most closely in league with the future," said the Norwegian playwright.

SOUND FAMILIAR?

An issue was before the town council in a Maine hamlet. Almost everyone seemed in favor except one middle-aged man who kept raising objections. Finally the council chairman asked the protester if he were a resident and voter.

The man replied that he was both and had been for 12 years. "Twelve years?" roared the chairman. "Sit down and keep still—we don't want any tourists telling us what to do!" — Industrial News Review.

 at home, for a brief time he is a minority, a stranger in a strange land.

Some of these people are gregarious and outgoing and have little difficulty mixing in a new community. These are the people who find it easy to make friends wherever they go; others are reserved, too shy to take the first step toward friendship, but who respond with warmth when greeted with warmth. Some are hostile and irritating. Perhaps they have been sent by an industry organization because of this very trait, with the hope that in the group activities they will learn how others react with hostility to their chip-on-the-shoulder attitude; finally, as in any community, there may be a few individuals who are inconsiderate and just plain obnoxious. Every barrel may have a few rotten apples.

Those seeking personal growth may want to know: "When I speak, do I use words which really express what I mean? Does my tone of voice convey sincerity, warmth, and a positive attitude, or betray fear, timidity, distrust, and a negative attitude? Do I appear relaxed and at ease, secure with self-confidence; or, do I bristle with insecure hostility?"

Do I believe myself to be without prejudice, but actually reveal strong bias? What are my fears? Can I discuss them openly—putting them on the table where I can look at them clearly? Do I dare to voice anger? Can I accept anger when it is directed at me? Can I show affection or love, or even accept it?"

The opportunity to find the answers to these and many other questions, can be discovered in the Lab. Our polite society dictates control of one's emotions. It may be your strong desire to call someone a horse's you-know-what, but you settle for a "Damn you!" Because a stress-laden atmosphere involving so many diverse personalities may bring raw emotions to the surface, you may decide, "So what can I do?" and blurt out what you really think. An instant and equally super-charged volley may be returned to you; however, both verbal dualists have watched seconds, members of the group whose objective interpretations, if voiced can be invaluable to everyone.

Is the Human Relations Laboratory worthwhile? I can only answer for myself, and I count it as one of the most rewarding experiences of my life. Whether within the small T-group (Training-Group) or in the total H R Community of over 100 individuals, I learned something from everyone, either through verbal and non-verbal communication or through observation. During this past year, a new awareness of myself and of others has continued to grow, nurtured by the

ing them on the table where I can look at them clearly? Do I dare to voice anger? Can I accept anger when it is directed at me? Can I show affection or love, or even accept it?"

Because a stress-laden atmosphere involving so many diverse personalities may bring raw emotions to the surface, you may decide, "So what can I do?" and blurt out what you really think. An instant and equally super-charged volley may be returned to you; however, both verbal dualists have watched seconds, members of the group whose objective interpretations, if voiced can be invaluable to everyone.

Is the Human Relations Laboratory worthwhile? I can only answer for myself, and I count it as one of the most rewarding experiences of my life. Whether within the small T-group (Training-Group) or in the total H R Community of over 100 individuals, I learned something from everyone, either through verbal and non-verbal communication or through observation. During this past year, a new awareness of myself and of others has continued to grow, nurtured by the

ing them on the table where I can look at them clearly? Do I dare to voice anger? Can I accept anger when it is directed at me? Can I show affection or love, or even accept it?"

The opportunity to find the answers to these and many other questions, can be discovered in the Lab. Our polite society dictates control of one's emotions. It may be your strong desire to call someone a horse's you-know-what, but you settle for a "Damn you!" Because a stress-laden atmosphere involving so many diverse personalities may bring raw emotions to the surface, you may decide, "So what can I do?" and blurt out what you really think. An instant and equally super-charged volley may be returned to you; however, both verbal dualists have watched seconds, members of the group whose objective interpretations, if voiced can be invaluable to everyone.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

— Mrs. Olive Davis, Corres. —

The pupils of the Union School took a field trip by bus to Auburn Wednesday where they were able to see the care of milk, milk bottles and pasteurization which they have been studying about in Social studies this spring.

After they toured the Hood's Dairy they went to the Pepsi Bottling plant and were conducted through this place where they were instructed about the process of making drink by a very able representative. After this they all were given a big cup of Pepsi and later were given checkers. The mothers, teachers and bus driver had the cutest little flash light fastened to a key chain.

The children went to Dry Mills to have their picnic lunch and enjoy the animals there.

The ones who assisted the teachers by caring for the children were, two room mothers, Mrs. Alta Waterhouse and Mrs. Patricia Thurlow. Other mothers were Mrs. Dugway, Mrs. Cushing, Mrs. Seames, Mrs. Sterling Mills, Esther Davis, and the bus driver, Talsto Koskela.

Mrs. Edith Epper, our music teacher, came Friday for music. We were able to go outside and play some singing games which we all enjoyed.

Mrs. Helen Berry made her last trip to help some of our group, Monday. We will be sorry not to be able to work with her next year as she is going into the English department in the new high school to teach.

We hope that both of them have a pleasant, restful summer.

Mrs. Addie Campbell has finished her work and is home. She

GREENWOOD CITY

— Mrs. Colista Morgan, Corres. —

June again! Once more we come to the close of a happy and successful year. We are putting away our pencils and notebooks and shutting our doors. I can not be wholly joyous for I am closing mine for the last time on a little room—my home—for more than forty years.

As I write this I am thinking of the inspiration and encouragement which my parents and friends have given me over the years through their thoughts and understanding. All has been deeply appreciated for without it I would never have made the "grade." Every kindness has been preserved in my big scrapbook of memory to which I return again and again.

My experiences have been many and varied. There have been bright days and gray days, but all of them enriching.

My reward has been deep satisfaction in knowing I have given my best.

So when on June 14th I turn my key for the last time it will close the door of the last of the seven rural schools here when I began.

Final things are sometimes hard to do or say. Longfellow's words can best express mine.

"If any thought of mine,
or sung or told,
Has ever given delight
or consolation
Ye have repaid me back a thousand-fold,
By every friendly sign and salutation."

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Morgan attended the reception for Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Sumner at Locke Mills, following their wedding on Saturday.

WOODSTOCK

Mrs. Doris Thistle, from Bath, was the guest speaker in the South Woodstock Seventh-day Adventist Church, at 11:30 worship service on June 1.

Mrs. Thistle spoke on Child Training and Christian Education, drawing from her years of successful teaching in the denomination's parochial schools, for experiences to illustrate her inspiring talk.

She said, "A child begins to form habits before he is a year old that will determine his future actions. The will of a child must never be broken, but he must be induced to surrender his will to what is right by love and patience."

In these days of crime and lawlessness, could it be that parents are to blame for not showing by precept and example the right way to live?

His favorite pie... apple or cherry?

Knowing these things is important.
Knowing this is important, too: A&P is a store you can trust.
Brides have been doing it for over a century.
As a matter of fact, nobody has ever had more brides walk down their aisle than A&P.

We think it's important for brides, new or old, to find a store they can trust, to know that everything they buy is totally guaranteed.

That's A&P Policy.
No matter who makes it, if A&P sells it, A&P guarantees it.
Is this a good reason for shopping A&P? It's one of many.

GOULD COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

wright Ibsen in stating his ideal; and Thomas Mann, the great German novelist, underlined the same theme in stating a reality — "A man lives not only his personal life as an individual but consciously or unconsciously the life of his epoch."

What will be the characteristics of life of the epoch of today's graduates' lives? What will be the influences and the marks which, consciously or unconsciously, you leave on your time. Thirty-one years ago President Roosevelt proclaimed, "This generation of Americans has a rendezvous with destiny." Today I think we would agree that the rendezvous was kept but that it was not the last. Today every generation of Americans has a rendezvous with destiny. It is implicit in our being as Americans that we have a special importance in the eyes of the world — not only for what we do but above all for what we are. If you live abroad, you become practiced in recognizing distinctions among nations, the varying strengths and rates of the varying national political and social pulses, so to speak, the nature of the response which different people will make under particular circumstances.

For Americans there is no choice. We can never submerge the realization that what we do is of vital importance not only to ourselves but to the world as a whole. Our failures cannot be camouflaged or forgotten, our successes can grant only temporary ease from continued striving. Our continued leadership of the free world depends in the last analysis on the nature of our society, upon our ability to bring to realization for all Americans the aspirations of our Founding Fathers. And the force of the examples we set, whether through success or failure, is more important to our leadership than any specific move we make in the domain of diplomacy itself. For Americans power is not enough, either to satisfy our own concept of our role in the world or to convince others of our worth as leaders. Our influence rests upon the extent to which we abide by our own historic principles.

Why is this so? Why are we so particularly on trial? No one is ever neutral on the subject of the United States. We have insensate critics and passionate admirers and there are many who combine these divergent strains in varying degree. But no one is indifferent. Our politics, our foreign policy, our theater, our literature, our music, our movies, our technology, our schools, our teenagers, our food — these are matters of interest and discussion, more or less informed, by average citizens in other countries. We may at first feel a bit bruised by such interest but we can never escape it.

Part of this intense interest — which in an election year is almost overwhelming — derives from the fact that other nations contributed to American history in a very special way — they gave us their blood and culture and traces of both remain strong in the American scene. We are a part of them. More important than our physical and ethnic heritage in the establishment of our particular role was, however, the fact that from its very beginning the United States has represented a new ideal among nations. The ideas in the Declaration of Independence were not new, for Jefferson and his colleagues were deeply permeated with the philosophies of 18th century Europe, but it was new that these ideals were conceived of as the benchmarks for government. "We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights governments are instituted among men." This ideal, so clearly stated, made a permanent impression on the imagination of the world. When British troops surrendered to the American colonists at Yorktown five years later they marched out to the music of a British popular song — "The World Turned Upside Down." In a sense that was the effect of the introduction into the world political thought of the principles of the American revolution.

In pursuit of the goal of a better life millions came here to make their homes and millions more overseas have looked upon the United States as the promised land.

So we must face the fact that the severe standards against which we are judged are standards which we ourselves have set. We sing in one of our proudest songs that "Thine alabaster cities gleam, undimmed by human tears," while on the television screens of the world appear scenes in which our cities are beset with violence and flames against backgrounds of hatred and fear.

Writing nearly 25 years ago on racial problems in the United States the great Swedish sociologist Gunnar Myrdal entitled his work "The American Dilemma." The dilemma is not the existence of poverty or racial friction — other countries and other societies have these problems in forms far more acute than in the United States. The specifically American dilemma, however, arises from the fact that the basic American heritage is one of freedom and equality. Our consciences know that any denial of this heritage is wrong. Other countries and other societies have different traditions — of clan or caste or chieftainship or paternalism or tradition in which they can pigeonhole their inequalities. We cannot do likewise without damage to our ideals, in short, without damage to ourselves. "I suppose, Mr. Secretary," a Senator said to Secretary Rusk some years ago, "you are going to tell us that we must pass this Civil Rights Bill because not to have it hurts our image abroad." "No, Senator," replied the Secretary, "I am going to tell you that you should pass this Bill because it is the right thing to do."

I believe therefore that the period which will bear the imprint of the graduates of 1968 will be a period of constant social change in which the question of the nature of our society will be uppermost. We are the country in the world best able to solve problems of this nature — if we cannot, there is little hope for others. We have the material strength, the traditions of freedom and a heritage of willingness to experiment, to improve and to change. We have the courage and I believe we have the will. Today we are still the leaders of the Free World, a position justified by our strength and a generation of fine leadership. I would hope that a generation from now will find us equally honored, but I would repeat that our destiny in the world overseas depends on how we live and develop together at home.

Regardless of the future form and scope of Gould Academy, the town and its values will remain a basic part of its fabric. Hopefully the process of mutual influence and permeation will continue. We are proud to be children of New England — perhaps more than we realize we are outcroppings of the New England spirit, like rocks in the pastures. Hard work, the trained intelligence, a desperately proud and independent spirit, and the constant presence of conscience in our daily lives — these are the traditions which are indigenous here. We are fortunate in our heritage.

"The man clothed in integrity," said a Roman poet two thousand years ago, "can go through the darkest wood without fear or danger." We all — but especially all of you — face a future of challenge and action and change. We need only remain constant to our traditions to make a contribution of value to the quality of American life.

That's right. If you add Bancardchek to a regular Casco checking account, we add a cash reserve of $500 or more to your checking account balance.

Then, if you should wish to borrow all or part of your cash reserve, you simply sit down and write out a check for the amount you need. No one knows you are borrowing except you and the bank.

The loan is repaid automatically on a monthly basis from your checking account. Or if you wish, you may pay off the balance at any time. Either way, you pay for only the amount of money you use for the time you use it.

Yes, Casco offers you the simplest and most private way to borrow money. And this is just one of many reasons why our customers say — "At Casco Bank & Trust they're always thinking... about us."

SPIRITUAL BUILDERS NEEDED

Today's world of destructive upheaval and tremendous change calls men to be spiritual builders.

This appeal from The Christian Science Board of Directors was heard last week by over 7,000 Christian Scientists, gathered in Boston from around the world for the Annual Meeting of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The message from the Board of Directors, read by Arthur P. Wuth, its new Chairman, stressed individual effort as the first step in any attempt to help solve the world's ills.

"Poverty, ignorance, war, racial conflict, immorality, civil disorder, mental and physical enslavement exemplify standards torn down, spiritual ideals desecrated, the best of civilization fallen into disuse," Mr. Wuth said.

Nehemiah's example as a spiritual builder was cited as still vital and useful to Christians today. In rebuilding the wall of Jerusalem, Mr. Wuth explained, Nehemiah was making practical his own understanding of God and his kingdom.

"Is not the need for individuals dedicated to their work, committed and consecrated to the task of spiritual building?" he asked.

Mr. Wuth quoted the disciple Peter: "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ (1 Peter 2:5).

"Lively stones imply more than building blocks," he continued. Liveliness denotes action, action resulting from spiritual unfoldment, action that is inspired, rightly motivated, God-supported, God-sustained."

Singling out war and racial conflict as two of the major problems which the Church must confront, Mr. Wuth said:

"The Church must fulfill the requirements of peace by teaching the practicality of the great commandments — love for God and love for one's neighbor. It must teach the allness of God, good, the impersonality of evil, and the ability of the individual, whatever his race or color to demonstrate this.

"Harmony, order, and peace know no color line. They belong to the spiritual heritage of each individual; and it is the responsibility of Church to assert, demonstrate and maintain this standard."

The healing and uplifting work of Jesus, Mr. Wuth said, attested the practicality of spiritual building by means of prayer and inspiration.

Mary Baker Eddy, who discovered and founded Christian Science, taught the need for each individual to contribute to the progress and regeneration of society through spiritual building he said.

Gordon V. Comer, newly-elected President for the coming year, said that whatever the turmoil of the present times, spiritual values and all the blessings they bring to humanity will survive.

The Christian Scientists who visited Boston this year noticed many changes resulting from the large building project now underway. Considerable demolition and foundation work has already been completed. Construction is expected to begin this month on a new Administration Building, a new Sunday School building and a large multi-purpose building.

At present the activities at the headquarters of the denomination are carried out in eight different buildings, so that centralization of facilities and personnel is long overdue. The new Church Center is expected to be under construction for about two and one half years.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Angevine attended a three day Ski - Doo Convention last week at Mt. Washington Hotel, Bretton Woods, N. H., as guests of Timberland Machines, Inc.
